

Sam Caldwell

Texas State Artist 2004

Texas Ducks Unlimited Artist 2011-2012

Sam Caldwell's coastal scenes of waterfowl, gamefish and people are prized by collectors from Texas to Maine. Working primarily in transparent watercolor, the Houston native seeks to capture the atmosphere of the moment, as well as the color and drama inherent in his outdoor subjects.

Many of his recent images feature young hunters and fishers. "Wildlife is primary in my work," he says, but notes that "people are important elements of wildlife."

Early in his career, Sam became involved in outdoor organizations like Ducks Unlimited and the Coastal Conservation Association. He remains deeply involved in promoting coastal scenes as fine art, and uses his printed images to help the coast. He is proud that the American Red Cross chose one of his paintings to help provide funds for 9-11 relief. The Coastal Conservation Association has benefited from numerous Caldwell art prints. Ducks Unlimited named Caldwell Texas State Artist for 2006-2007, and again for 2011 and 2012.

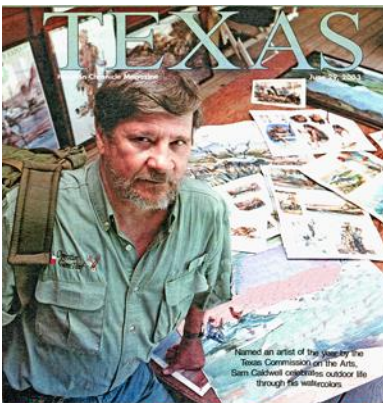

Sam gives back to the community

Sam is involved in many charitable organizations including Cystic Fibrosis, Coastal Conservation Association, Operation Game Thief and the Texas Park & Wildlife Foundation.

Caldwell is also well known as an outdoor writer. His co-authored book for the CCA, Change of Tides, A Narrative History of the Coastal Conservation Association, was named as Texas' best outdoor book for 2000.

Sam Caldwell's paintings and prints can be seen at his gallery and studio in Kingwood, near Houston, and on his website at www.samcaldwell.com
